

Pension Provision

The next Lobler case in the making?

Agenda

---

- ▶ Customer Redress –
  - ▶ FCA Expectations and HMRC reality
- ▶ Flexible Access –
  - ▶ Should there be a cooling-off period
- ▶ Scheme sanction charge
  - ▶ So what is “just and reasonable”?

Customer Redress – the FCA expectation

- ▶ Customers to be restored to the correct position
- ▶ This should be after the deduction of tax
- ▶ Historically, the expectation was that the customer's fund would be restored

Redress – the common tax issues

- ▶ The taxation of interest – to withhold or not
- ▶ Putting the customer back in the post-tax position – how do you know?
- ▶ Capital gains and the application of ESC D33
- ▶ Whether to give a customer a cash sum or credit their account

Customer Redress – the practical issues

The “what ifs”:

- ▶ The member has transferred the fund elsewhere
- ▶ The new provider will not accept the redress
- ▶ An annuity has been taken
- ▶ The member has died

Redress – how HMRC can treat a pension payment

- ▶ Uplifting a policy
- ▶ Relief at source for a third-party contribution
- ▶ Counting towards the annual allowance
- ▶ And if the member has enhanced protection to the lifetime allowance.....
- ▶ Where the payment is deemed to arise from the pension fund – is it an unauthorised payment?

The precedents from life policies

- ▶ The case of Lobler v HMRC (2015) introduced the concept of a wholly uneconomic gain
- ▶ Principle established that HMRC could recalculate the gain on a part surrender where the tax charge was wholly disproportionate
- ▶ Given the potentially penal tax rates that may apply to certain methods of redress – should there be scope for HMRC to bring similar considerations to pensions?

When can a 30 day cooling-off period apply?

- ▶ Purchasing a personal pension
- ▶ Car Insurance
- ▶ Travel Insurance
- ▶ When activated – contract is treated as not having been made

When does a 30 day cooling off period NOT apply?

- ▶ When choosing how to take your benefits from a pension...

Flexible Access – a case study

---

- ▶ Customer requests full benefit crystallisation
- ▶ Wishes to take 25% tax-free lump sum, but
- ▶ Leave balance of funds invested for subsequent drawdown

However:

- ▶ Advisor mistakenly keys in full flexible access

Advisor Error – the changed position

In the event of an erroneous payment through advisor error, HMRC's view was originally:

- ▶ The returned payment would count as a third-party contribution
  - ▶ Be subject to the annual allowance charge
  - ▶ Cause loss of enhanced protection to the LTA
  - ▶ Be tested against the LTA again when subsequently crystallised
- ▶ However, Pensions Newsletter 99 introduced the concept of “advisor error”

Scheme Sanction Charge – how far can a Provider go?

Scheme Sanction Charges – just and reasonable

---

So would the provider be viewed as being the innocent party where:

- ▶ The use of a property in a SIPP changes from commercial to residential
- ▶ A member transfers to a pension liberation scheme
- ▶ A customer who has transferred receives a Unit Pricing adjustment directly when the new provider will not accept the additional amount

The Provider conundrum

- ▶ How will HMRC view the payment
- ▶ How is it possible to demonstrate that controls were robust and effective
- ▶ Will the FCA / PRA / FOS expect the payment to be made anyway
- ▶ Can it be demonstrated that there is a reasonable expectation that a payment would be ordered by a Court
- ▶ What if the customer goes to the Press?
